Dr. Marina Cacace, senior researcher at ASDO, has carried out several research projects on the different forms of women's occupational segregation, as well as on women's leadership, women in the urban environment, the reconciliation of professional and family life, women in politics, women in science. She directed the team of ASDO in the 7FP PRAGES project on gender equality programmes in scientific institutions, and authored the final Guidelines. She is currently the team leader for ASDO in the structural change project STAGES. She also studied the dynamics of young women's identification and involvement with feminism and the women's movement.
