Maren A. Jochimsen is Managing Director of the Essen College of Gender Studies EKfG, a central research institution of the University of Duisburg-Essen, Germany. The College's purpose is to foster interdisciplinary cooperation in the field of gender research by involving all faculties – medicine, the natural sciences, technology and engineering as well as the social sciences and humanities – in its research programme. Members of the College are affiliated at institutes at all three university locations: the campuses in Essen and Duisburg as well as the University's medical clinic in Essen, standing for a high potential of multi- and interdisciplinary cooperation.

Before joining the University of Duisburg-Essen in 2010, Maren A. Jochimsen was Secretary General of the European Platform of Women Scientists EPWS, an umbrella organization of networks of women scientists and organisations working towards equal opportunity in research from all over Europe and beyond, building-up and heading the EPWS Secretariat in Brussels.

Maren A. Jochimsen holds a Doctorate in Ecological Economics from the University of St. Gallen, Switzerland, where she subsequently worked as researcher. Her postdoctoral research on the integration of caring activities in economic science took her to the University of Cambridge, Harvard University, and the University of Amsterdam. She has published on ecological economics, care and economics as well as women and science and European research policy.
